I had to completely write this site from scratch, as I did not do a currency converter previously. Also this was my first ever time using and implementing an API so it was fun and challenging at the same time. I had used PHP way back when I first started tinkering with computers back when I was 11 but I haven't used it since and it was nice relearning it. The most time consuming thing about this project was getting the API to work with my site.
