I have had previous experience with using javascript before, I learned how to make 3d games with it. I didn't use any other material for the creation of this project, I mean the project isn't all that fabulous, but the requirements weren't all that difficult. The most time consuming thing for me was remembering how to code in javascript, I made tons of syntax mistakes due to me learning c++, Java, and javascript all at the same time. I have to say this project was fun and I enjoyed working out all of the bugs that I eventually encountered.
